Abstract :

This research is an attempt to reveal the relationship between China and Iran, explain its different levels, and examine the mutual views and political purposes of the two sides on each other, Diplomacy, economy and even geopolitics, as the scope of relations is wide in history, we regard the end of the cold war as the time fulcrum of our research, which is due to several considerations. The international space station is an important structural moment in the field of international relations, because it has promoted profound changes in the international system and its interactions and problems, the most important of which is the emergence and upgrading of many behaviors. We are referring to China here. As a research topic involving China and Iran, regional leadership and possible global leadership are the key to understand the pattern and nature of their relationship, especially the relationship between China and Iran knows the particularity of its territory and holds an abnormal attitude towards the international system from the Western perspective of the United States.

In another case, the broad formulation of China's policy or strategy must be accompanied by the "route and route" initiative, which is called universality because of its complexity. Therefore, China's future status will be a topic worthy of study and analysis, and even the most important topic in the field of relations. Therefore, the focus of the study is to include the initiative as another irreplaceable aspect of China Iran relations into the analysis, as the decisive factor and way of these relations.

On this basis, this study attempts to infer Iran's position in this initiative, as well as China's views on what Iran can provide to China and how Iran influences and influences China. This will inevitably produce mutual influence, especially when the two sides feel uneasy in their relations with the United States, the proposal and possible existence of the China Iraq alliance is a research requirement. There is an urgent need to put forward a scientific academic point of view under the guidance of theoretical model and methodology, in order to put forward a scientific point of view and result as close to the facts and more objective as possible, which will be an attempt, The research report was submitted.

Key words :Iran, China, Route and Route Initiative.
